Located in the south of Tarragona, the ever-changing natural landscape of the Ebro Delta is a source of endless beauty. More than 100 kilometres of coastline, sweeping sand dunes, villages and stunning natural spaces like you've never seen before. This protected Natural Park and biosphere reserve is Spain's second largest wetland after the Doñana National Park. That makes it a fantastic destination for tourism and for boat trips on the river.

From Deltebre, a highway as far as the eye can see leads us straight to the Mediterranean. Just 500 metres from Riumar beach and its dunes is this impressive farmstead, home to expert rice specialists for almost two hundred years.

The entire farmstead offers Ebro river views and the property features two fully-equipped residences, a 310 sqm home with a patio and another spanning 360 sqm.

The two residences are separated by an open-plan warehouse measuring 253 sqm which has been fully restored in the style of the period.

It also boasts a 300 sqm workshop-warehouse, which is right next door to the property's crowing jewel: a fully-functioning, almost 200-year-old rice mill for on-site milling, and facilities equipped with cutting-edge machinery.

The estate spans a total of 7 hectares of farmland for its own cultivation and operation.

The door to this truly extraordinary property is wide open to its lucky new owners.
