The house itself is located in Castellón and dates from the eighteenth century and rests on the foundations of an old Moorish farmhouse. It has a colourful history: local legend has it that the writer Blasco Ibáñez found sanctuary here in the early twentieth century.

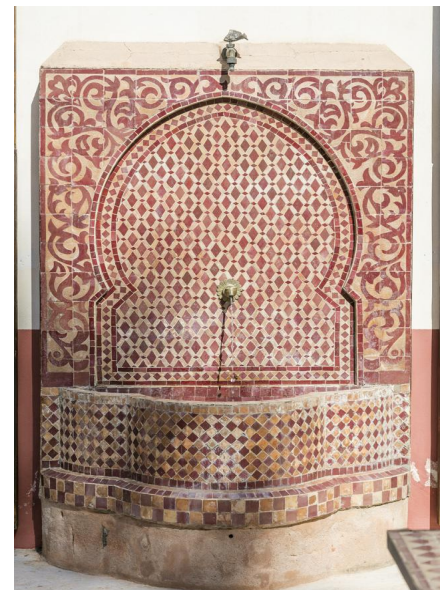

A unique opportunity to acquire an exclusive country estate steeped in historical interest, occupying a spectacular mountain setting on the site of an ancient olive grove, where oil was pressed for many centuries.

Following thoughtful restoration around ten years ago, the interior provides a wide array of delightful traditional features, with exposed stone walls and beamed ceilings throughout.

The main house spans approximately 1,400 m², comprising ten bedrooms, each with its own bathroom (including some suites), multiple spacious reception rooms, a kitchen with breakfast area, a cosy library and a separate groundsman's cottage.

Currently used as a boutique hotel, this exclusive country estate is being sold as a going concern with significant income-generating potential. All necessary licences for tourist accommodation and horse riding have been obtained by the present owner. With its own spa, massage room, infinity pool with chill-out area, equestrian facilities (stabling, riding hall and 11 paddocks), space for outdoor sports and activities and even a charming private chapel, it is perfectly equipped for hotel use, but this haven of outdoor living would also make a magnificent family retreat.

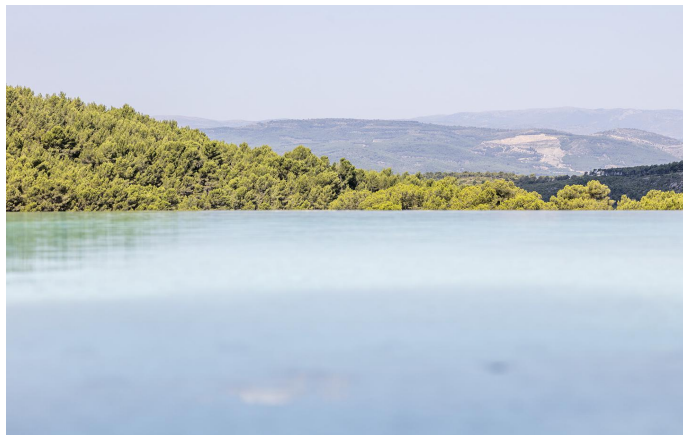

Much of the estate is carpeted in olive trees and forest, offering wonderful hiking trails with views of its own nearby reservoir (a lovely picnic spot) – photography enthusiasts will be in their element. Perched high on the hillside, a hammock area is a blissful spot for the less energetic to drink in the scene.
